HOW GOLD WAS FOUND IN CANDLE CREEK.

Nome Mine Owner Writes That Nine Men Control a Placer in Alaska.

An account of the discovery of Candle Creek, one of the richest gold placers of the Arctic, is given in a letter by W. J. Stanley, now a mine owner at Nome.
"I was only lucky enough to get a lay or east on a Candle Creek claim, but I can sell the lay to-day in Nome before I have struck a blow and make a good year's sal-ary out of it," he writes. "The strike was made in August by H. O. Blankenship, A. Patterson and Enos. Thomas, a squaw man. Patterson was afterwards drowned in the Arctic Ocean, near Candle Creek. "Thomas is on Candle Creek with his native wife. He doesn't know what to do with his money after being in Alaska so many years, living on scal oil and whale

Alaska for years, and knew a good thing when they saw it. 'Arctic Bill' gave Bian-kenship all the money ne had, a lot of conversation and a horse-a thing the natives over there had never seen before and got at least a million dollars' worth of Candle Creek in return. I believe he has two years to pay blankenship a beliance of fise.00. But he will take that out of one claim next summer. But he will take that out of one claim next summer.

"Candle Creek is frozen now. But a lot of men had reshed in there and in the few weeks before it froze up it is estimated that $100,000 was 'entped' off the claims by pams and rockers. And all of that was taken out without putting in a dam, a waste ditch, or running up a bedrock drain. The men just get in the water up to their hips and shoveled it out of the surface grayel. If they were chasted off one chain they would go on to the next. They all got a winter grub stake and every one there has a poke.

they would go on to the next. They all got a winter grub stake and every one there has a poke.

"Louis Lane has a claim on Canstle Creek, and when he and his father, C. D. Lane, reached it there were plenty of subjects on the ground. They had them chased off twice, but they came back. Mr. Lane laughed when told the third time of their persistency, and said: Let them rock. They must need the mency to stand in that cold water, and, besides, the lee will stop them within a week. No studeing has been done, but next spring, as soon as it thaws out, the owners of the claims will commence work on a large scale.

"Most of the claims of the three lecators have been bought or bonded by the following well-known mining men: C. D. Lane, Jafet Lindeberg of the Pioneer Mining Company, Cabell Whitebead of the District Mining Company, Tim R. Sullivan, William N. Armstrong tarette Balb, Magnus Kjelsberg, W. T. Fee (Missouri Bill), George W. Long and United States Commissioner Thomas Noyer. This is a complete list of the new arctic rich men. Still, there are some other men who own small interests on the tributaries of Candle Creek, three of which—Patterson, Willow and Polato—show almost as good prospects as Candle itself, In fact, Patterson, Which is about the size of the once famous Eldorado, prospects fully as good as Candle Creek.

> Creek was the greatest that ever struck the town. Small said and row boats that could hardly be given away went up to foolish prices, and hundreds of foolish peo-ple started with them to make a 32-mile trip, following the coast line up through Bering Strait and along the Arctic Ocean coast line to the Keewalk River, then up the river ten miles to Candle Creek, Two strainers have made two successful trips, leaded with supplies and passengers. A great effort has been made to get them to try another trip, but they have flatly refused to risk losing their steamers in the fast making lee.

fry another 17p, but they have flatly refused to risk losing their steamers in the fast making ice.

"But nothing hat good reports and gold come down from Candle Creek, and everybody who goes up there stays. The few who came down on the first trip of the steamers bought supplies with Candle Creek gold and returned on the next steamer. The fare is $50, treight, $40 per ton.

"Two things stand out prominently as different from the two previous great strikes in Alaska. First, that neither Eldorado nor Auvil Creek ever made half of the surface showing without reaching bedrock that Candle Creek has; second, for months after Eldorado and Auvil were struck half of the miners said they were he good, and chains could be bought for a few hundred dollars. It is a common remark on the streets of Nome: Not one condemning rejort from Candle Creek. And the first trices on claims were from $10,000 to $15,000.
